Week 5 – Bills, Bills and More Bills

In this week’s edition of the Legislative Update you will find our first bill-tracking list for this session. The version we provide you here is a much pared down version of the one I keep on my own computer.

We are only halfway through the session and so far 542 bills have been introduced in the Senate, and 992 bills have been introduced in the House. Political reporters pointed out this week that the Legislature has only completed a handful of bills up to now.

The fact is that most of these bills will never see the light of day. Most will never even get a committee hearing. And for that I say, “Thank goodness.” Because there are some really, really terrible bills included in the lot.

For example, HB 2821 and SB 469 are identical bills introduced in each house. They are identically bad. The language was written by the state Chamber of Commerce, and the purpose of the proposed legislation is to streamline and fast-track air pollution permits.

If this legislation passes, permitting time would be dramatically reduced, as would the opportunity for public comment. Even the DEP opposes these bills; Secretary Timmermeyer has gone so far as to say they “would gut the air permitting process.”

Unfortunately, there are some sponsors for these two bills who should have known better than to sign on. So we are going to have to expend unnecessary time and energy trying to defeat them.

Bottle Bill Gets Big Boost

By Denise Poole, WVEC Program Coordinator

Bottle Bill Day at the Capitol was a big boost to our efforts this year. Thursday reflected the commitment to see this bill through both the House and Senate by legislators and citizens alike. West Virginia needs to finally pass a container law.

The day was organized by Linda Frame with WV-CAG, who has been working on this issue for years. A well-attended and interesting press conference was held in the Governor's office lobby / press room of the capitol, and other activities included: an interview from the capitol on Hoppy Kercheval's radio show by both Linda and Mike McCray with Strategic Materials in Maine (a state who is reaping the benefits of a container law that has been in effect for 30 years) who came to West Virginia's capitol to talk directly with our legislators; and lobbying our representatives.

The crowd who gathered for the press conference represented 'Adopt A Highway' volunteers, state Delegates & Senators, Mayors, former candidates for office, concerned citizens - all of whom came to the capitol to visit their legislators to encourage support for, and passage of this bill.

Two of the sponsors of the Bottle Bill, SB 370 and HB 2773, Senator Brooks McCabe and Delegate Barbara Fleischauer were among the speakers - along with Governor Manchin and an ‘Adopt A Highway’ representative. Although Governor Manchin did not come out and “speak the words” and actually say he would sign such a bill if it passed both houses, he spoke of the history of West Virginia’s litter, and referred to the REAP program he reinstated that his uncle, A. James Manchin began in the 1960’s.

Even as we go to press, Linda and Mike McCray are at the capitol again today meeting with legislators. Let's hope their efforts are greeted with open minds under the dome, and more of our representatives support the bottle bill.

You can help! Keep those calls and e-mails coming in. Call the capitol's toll free number: 1-877-565-3447 to get through to your legislators. You can read the bill at: www.wvbottlebill.org.

In Their Own Words - Meet WVEC Lobby Team

JB's Garbage History
By John Christensen, WVEC Lobbyist

When I remember back to the days of the spirited garbage wars across West Virginia, it brought to mind so many wonderful firsts in mine and many other citizen activist lives.

It was the first time I ever got involved in local and state government issues at the ripe old age of 32, and after getting a taste I wondered to myself, what took me so long? I attended my first community organizing meeting, wrote my first letter to the editor, and became initially acquainted with local and state elected officials.

I was enticed to donate time and money to a cause that I believed in. I got involved in something greater than myself and my young family for the greater good of the community I resided in. I became a meeting organizer, host, and attendee - so many meetings it’s a wonder my wife didn’t divorce me sooner! I remember that people came into the environmental movement and people left the movement, but the hard core stayed the course never giving up on the concept of life, liberty, the pursuit of happiness and clean well water.

I met my first governor Arch Moore, aka Shelley’s Dad, who would later be convicted of taking bribes well before Shelley would be elected to the U.S. Congress. I thought he was on our side when he gave political speeches at Hedgesville High School’s packed auditorium. I made my first trip to Charleston where I realized I lived closer to five other state capitols.

Since the beginning of my civic education, I always wondered what if anything it would lead to: could we stop the LCS landfill, could we elect a green governor, or could we keep our waters clean and protected ... and the answer is that it never ends with any of these goals but it keeps on keeping on with more issues coming every session.

It was with that in mind that I told Don Garvin I would be honored to join him in this years 78th Legislative session and try to help fight the good fight along side so many like-minded environmentalists. Finally a job that I can enjoy and get the rewards that hopefully we’ll harvest in the way of new legislation that protects the citizens of the great state of West Virginia - not necessarily open for all businesses. I thank E-council for the opportunity to do just that.

From Connecticut to West Virginia
By Dennis Cunningham, WVEC Lobbyist

My name is Dennis Cunningham. I recently joined the West Virginia Environmental Council lobby team, working part time. I first became aware of WVEC by attending a spaghetti supper fundraising party hosted by board member Chelena McCoy.

Shortly after moving to West Virginia in the Summer of 2005, I learned about the serious environmental issues facing West Virginians by attending rallies at the Capitol to protest mountain top removal and to hear first hand from families affected by this devastating practice.

Prior to moving to West Virginia I helped start a non profit housing development organization in Hartford Connecticut and worked as its executive director for 19 years. The organization acquired vacant buildings and rehabilitated as multi-family dwellings. Through a program of urban homesteading, low income families were able to cooperatively own their homes, after completing significant amount of sweat equity and attending cooperative ownership training.

The similarity between the work I did in Hartford and the work of WVEC is that both involve convincing government officials that low income families have rights too, and deserve to be heard.

Grassroots Lobbying Making A Big Difference

This year WVEC has been particularly fortunate in having more grassroots lobbyists - folks from legislators' home districts - than we’ve had in recent years. And it's paying off.

Each Tuesday a team of coalfield residents and other WVEC supporters converge on the capitol to talk to Senators and Delegates about the dangers of coal sludge impoundments and coal slurry injection. They are being well received.

We have also had two great lobby days - first for Clean Elections, then for the Bottle Bill. Come join us and make a difference!
Tortuous Week for DEP
Water Rules
By Donald S. Garvin, Jr.
WVEC Legislative Coordinator

This was the week that the “regulated community” – i.e., the polluters – began its attempt to gut the two regulatory rules that provide water quality protections promulgated by the Department of Environmental Protection.

It was a difficult week, to say the least.

It took three different meetings for the Senate Energy, Industry and Mining Committee (EIM) to pass out SB 255, the Antidegradation Rule containing the Tier 2.5 stream list (60-CSR-5).

But eventually the committee defeated an amendment by Senator Dave Sypolt (R-Preston County), and passed the rule out “without recommendation.”

Sypolt had proposed an amendment that would have stricken 272 of the 310 streams on the proposed Tier 2.5 stream list, leaving just 38 streams on the list, purportedly only the streams that had received no objection during the extensive comment periods DEP allowed in considering this rule.

In addition, Sypolt’s amendment would have required DEP essentially to begin again on each of the 272 streams removed from the list, and provide “good scientific rationale” for placing the stream on the Tier 2.5 list.

Thankfully, a majority of the committee did not agree.

SB 255, with the Tier 2.5 stream list that DEP proposed still intact, will next be considered in Senate Natural Resources Committee, and then by Senate Judiciary Committee. This is the first DEP rule I have ever encountered that has been triple referenced.

In contrast to the EIM process, things went way too smoothly in Senate Natural Resources Committee this week when members considered SB 259, the Water Quality Standards rule (47-CSR-2) that contains the “Category B2” trout stream list.

Category B2 provides water quality standards that are protective of supporting aquatic life, which is a higher level of protection than even drinking water standards. Category B2 applies to a list of streams that are capable of supporting trout year-round (this is a different sub-set of trout streams than the reproducing native brook trout streams on the Tier 2.5 list).

Industry has wanted to change the definition of what a trout stream is for a long time, but apparently they have decided to fight their battle in Senate Judiciary Committee. Because after a very excellent description of the rule by committee staff, the committee voted the rule out without one comment from any Senator. Not one.

So SB 259 now goes to Judiciary Committee for further consideration. This rule is only double referenced.

House committees have not yet begun to take up the DEP rules.

So with less than half the session remaining, both these rules have a long way to go.

And I find myself in a strange new position – supporting regulatory rules proposed by DEP!

Kanawha State Forest Bill Makes Headlines
By Gary Zuckett, WV-Citizen Action Group

The bill supported by the Kanawha State Forest Coalition to protect the popular forest from further abuse by Oil & Gas drillers was introduced this week in both House and Senate. The following day it got front-page attention by the Charleston Gazette with supportive quotes by several of the bills sponsors. All the districts Senators are co-sponsors and nine of the areas eleven Delegates have signed on to this measure that would apply only to Kanawha State Forest (KSF).

This bill would not ban drilling on the forest property (the state doesn’t own the minerals) but provide for public comments, additional advance reporting by drillers to park officials, an enforcement action plan for violations, and public disclosure when new drilling permits are being considered. It would also provide for minimum surface disturbance, revegetation using native plants and prohibit “daylighting” - the practice of cutting a 60-foot wide swath for wooded roads in the hopes that the sun will dry out the road surface.

In the Senate, it is SB 460 in Natural Resources Committee. Chair Fanning indicates he will run the bill next week so calls, e-mails and visits to members of this committee would be most welcome.

In the House it is HB 2848 and was sent to Ag & Nat Resources then Judiciary. Same treatment is needed for members of these committees.

WV-Citizen Action, who was a leader in the effort to have commercial logging banned in KSF nearly a decade ago, is again actively working with the KSFCoalition to add these additional protections to this much loved and utilized forest located just a short drive from our state capitol.
